U. S. Tries to Find Who Bought TNT

By JAMES LEE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (INS)—The War Assets Administration was attempting to learn today whether it has sold TNT to bank robbers, potential assassins, village idiots, or similar undesirable characters. The agency's compliance enforcement division is conducting an all-out investigation into the sale of nearly 25,000,000 tons of the high explosive, offered last September to all comers.

Other inquiries are being pressed by the FBI and the WAA into acquisition of cyclonite and other super-explosives for use in Palestine.

WIDELY ADVERTISED

But it is the TNT sale, a spokesman admitted, which may cause the agency to wind up with a red face plus evidence which will be passed along to the Justice Dept.

The spokesman pointed out that TNT was nationally advertised by WAA at a "new low price" of "only four and one-half cents a pound" last summer and that vast quantities were sold in the open market after sale to priority groups ended Sept. 2.

The WAA official said:

"Our advertisements got results. Thousands of farmers, miners and others with legitimate uses for TNT stocked up with the stuff at bargain basement rates."

"But it is possible that in the public sale of the explosive, quantities of it got into the hands of persons who may have intended to make illegal use of it."

LISTS CHECKED

"Therefore, after disclosure of the seizure of 69 tons of M-3, or 'cyclonite,' which had been bought in New York by representatives of Palestine interests, an investigation was ordered to determine what has happened to our TNT."

Under supervision of Carl H. King, chief of the WAA compliance enforcement division, agents are scrutinizing the lists of TNT purchasers who got in on the "good thing" before sale of surplus explosives was halted Dec. 12.

Influenza on Increase But No Epidemic in Sight

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (AP)—Influenza is striking Americans this winter at a rate higher than is normally expected, the United States Public Health service reported today, but there are no indications of a widespread epidemic as yet.

Since early August 53,893 cases have been reported, compared with 36,640 for the corresponding period in 1946-47, the service said. Most of the cases occurred in southern and southwestern states.

Auto Union Seek 30c. an Hour Hike

DETROIT, Jan. 16 (AP)—The CIO United Auto Workers announced today they would seek a wage increase of 25 cents an hour and an additional 5 cents for other benefits in forthcoming negotiations with the motor car industry. The demands, approved by the union's 22-man executive board, are aimed at obtaining a third round of cost-of-living adjustments since the war.

Also included are demands for a guaranteed weekly wage and a three weeks' vacation for workers with five year seniority.

20 More Slain In Palestine War

JERUSALEM, Jan. 16 (AP)—Bombings and shootings scourged Haifa today as Arab-Jewish fighting throughout the Holy Land brought death to at least 20 persons.

Jewish bombs at Haifa blasted Arab buses and homes; the Jews said shelled Arab snipers. The Arabs replied with shootings and stabbings in the streets.

Crumbling Walls Still Peril Firemen

Firemen still battled the stubborn remnants of the $1,250,000 blaze which destroyed the five-story Armour Leather Co. warehouse in Sleeper st., South Boston, today as weakened walls, weighted by tons of ice, threatened to collapse on them. Deputy Chief Edward Galvin, who took over supervision of the fire-fighting at 8 a. m. as It'll Warm Up a Little, but Watch Out!

Brief relief from near-zero temperatures today will be followed by a return of the same—and many or them—for the week-end, the weatherman said today. He expected the thermometer to reach a high of 28 today in a forecast which called for "mostly cloudy and milder" weather. He made no mention of snow.

This morning's Boston minimum was 11 degrees, 8 higher than yesterday's record low for the winter. But many outlying districts reported colder readings today than yesterday. At the Concord weather station it was 14 below, the lowest in three years.

Other readings were: Bedford 11 below; Lexington, 5 below; Arlington, 5 above. Many zero readings were recorded along the South Shore. A low of 14 was forecast for Boston tonight with a prediction of "fair and colder" Saturday.

Maine got the severest weather of winter today and Houlton won the title of the nation's coldest spot with 26 below. It was 19 below in Portland.

Rare Signals Recall Firemen in Emergency

Boston firemen recalled today that the three special signals flashed to all fire houses during the five-alarm South Boston blaze have rarely been used in combination in recent years.

The first ordered all day shifts to remain on duty, then a recall signal brought back to stations men on vacation or off duty; and finally a call informed all men to report to their own companies instead of the nearest firehouse, the usual procedure.

weary firemen were relieved by fresh crews after an all-night battle, had about 20 men inside the building fighting scattered blazes in bales of leather and burlap.

Floors in the rear of the building and collapsed in many places but still was firm in the front of the structure. Galvin said the walls were being watched carefully for any sign of collapse but thus far were holding.

HOSE LINES FROZEN

While the remnants of the blaze were being fought inside the building, other firemen started the task of rolling up hundreds of feet of hose no longer in use in the fire-fighting. Many of the lines were embedded in solid ice, which had frozen over them as tons of water escaped from the building into the trees yesterday and last night.

Firemen were busy with axes chopping the ice cover to release the frozen lines. Other firemen were pumping out cellars of adjoining buildings which had been flooded by the tons of water poured into the burning building. The all-out on the fire was sounded at 10:52 a. m. today, just 21 hours and 54 minutes after the first alarm was turned in.

When the regular morning shift relieved this force at 8 a. m., they found still on the job an antique piece of apparatus known as the "Old Christy Steamer," now 55 years old and used only in parades as a curiosity for the past 20 years. It was used to de-ice apparatus by pouring steam from its four jets.

TWO IN HOSPITAL

Two firemen were still in City Hospital and five others were nursing less serious injuries at home.

With the hospital patients were victims of fall from the ice, Martin J. McDonough, 52, of Temple st., West Roxbury, with a possible broken back and a broken leg; and Alphonse Audette, 37, of Peters st., South Boston, with a broken arm.

The other casualties were James McPherson, 33, of Telegraph st., South Boston, a broken finger; Frank P. Oldakowski, 25, of Raven st., Dorchester, sprained back; John J. Jennings, 27, of Thomas Park, South Boston, exposure and exhaustion; Thomas Carroll, 23, of G st., South Boston, smoke inhalation; and Joseph Connolly, 34, of West 5th st., South Boston, burns on the face.

Chief Boutlier called it Boston's worst fire since the warehouse conflagration in Rutherford ave., Charlestown, in 1942. During the early stages of the eight-hour fight to bring the flames under control, Boutlier warned deputy chiefs to "take extra precautions against the possibility of crumbling walls."

Estimates of total damage rose after John L. Devaney of Readville, manager of the Armour Leather Co., estimated "more than $1,000,000" damage was done to leather stocks and equipment. To this was added the damage to the building and smoke and water damage to adjoining structures.

Snyder Sees Veto of GOP Tax Cut Bill

By RAYMOND WILCOVE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (INS)—Treasury Sec. Snyder told Congress today the Republican-sponsored tax reduction bill would result in a budget deficit of more than two billion dollars in the 1949 fiscal year and hinted President Truman would veto the measure.

Snyder also announced the administration's opposition to a nation-wide extension of the community property plan for tax purposes and renewed President Truman's request for a "cost of living" tax reduction of $40 for every taxpayer and each of his dependents.

Snyder, appearing before the tax-drafting House ways and means committee, said the President's proposed tax cut would be offset by partial restoration of the wartime excess profits tax.

He advised the committee the Republican measure sponsored by Rep. Knutson of Minnesota, its chairman, would slash government revenue by $6,905,000,000 annually.

Snyder declared:

"The cold facts are that present economic conditions, budgetary considerations, inflationary pressures and debt management problems require the maintenance of government revenues at present level."

Snyder was the first witness to testify at the opening of public hearings on the Knutson bill, whose enactment House Republican leaders have set for this month.

Girl Prodigy Feared Kidnaped, Call FBI

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 16 (INS)—A widespread search, spurred by fears of kidnapping, spread throughout Southern California today for 14-year-old Jacqueline Horner, brilliant pianist-actress, who mysteriously disappeared last Tuesday. Atty. Paul Hill, representing the child's mother, Mrs. Clara Horner, asked the FBI to join the search on the theory she may have been kidnapped. No ransom note has been received, however, and whether the FBI could or would join with police and deputy sheriffs in the search was not immediately made known.

'Dahlia' Slaying Still Unsolved

The sadistic murder of 22-year-old Elizabeth Short, raven-haired Medford beauty, who became known as the "Black Dahlia," was no nearer solution today than a year ago, when her unclothed and hacked body was discovered in a Los Angeles vacant lot.

Los Angeles police revealed their files on the case had become the most voluminous of all their murder records.

Elizabeth Short was the daughter of Mrs. Phoebe M. Short, Salem st., Medford. She went to California in 1942, hoping to break into the movies.

The pretty Medford girl's photogenic black hair, sea-green eyes and trim figure soon won her a place as a model. The movies were harder to crack.

Then Jan. 9, 1947, she vanished. She was found dead and incredibly mutilated in the vacant lot Jan. 15.

The girl's disappearance recalled the case of Elizabeth Short, the ill-fated "Black Dahlia" whose mutilated body was found in a vacant lot a year ago and whose slaying never was solved.

Miss Horner made an impressive debut with the Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra at the age of eight. During two and a half years under contract to MGM she appeared in featured roles in "Smilin' Through" and "Panama Hattie."

Doomed Killer Phones Pair To Ask Murder Confession

WALLA WALLA, Wash., Jan. 16 (AP)—In a long-distance, three-way telephone call to Chicago, Jake Bird, condemned axe slayer, accused two men held by Evanston, Ill., police of participating in the 1942 Galvin double slaying at Evanston.

Bay State Oil Survey Urged

An immediate survey to determine how much oil is available in Massachusetts was urged today by Gov. Bradford's fuel oil advisory committee.

With Fuel Co-ordinator George H. Rockwell in Washington, the committee demanded that his deputy, Robert H. Montgomery, undertake the probe.

Stressing the need for a quick survey with a new cold wave threatening, the committee said it was necessary in order than an even distribution of fuel oil to all consumers could be assured.

He gave full details of the killing of Mrs. Lillian Galvin and her maid to Evanston police officials who were listening in, prison officers here said. Harry Engstrom, acting chief of detectives at Evanston, here at the prison, arranged the telephone call.

Talking with men identified here only as "Sugar Man" Hockett and another known as "Lovelace," he asked them to "tell the truth about the whole affair and make the best deal they could."

CALM DURING CALL

Bird, who has told police officials of numerous killings over the country and who had been scheduled to go to the gallows early today, was calm throughout the entire call, which lasted more than an hour and a half.

Several days ago, Gov. Mon C. Wallgren gave him a 60-day reprieve at the request of the Illinois governor.

Bird talked first with the man identified as "Sugar Man" Hockett. He told officers previously that "Sugar Man" was only 17 at the time the crime was committed and that he felt responsible for the youth.

Bird's opening words were: "Hello, is that you, 'Sugar Man'?"

DENIES KNOWING BIRD

On the other end of the line, prison officials said, "Sugar Man" denied knowing Bird or anything about the case.

Bird argued with him, at times getting tough in his conversation. Bird described the crime. He said the two women were killed by "Sugar Man" and a "Kid Smith," who is now serving time in the Michigan State Prison on another murder case.

Bird pleaded with "Sugar Man" to tell the whole truth and go to the state attorney's office to "make the best deal that you can."

Bird then talked with the man known as "Lovelace."

Lovelace had had no connection with the crime except going along with them and helping dispose of the loot, Bird said.

A third man Bird talked with was described as "Shaky Jake." Bird said that a brother-in-law of "Shaky Jake" had been given all the jewelry and furs from the Galvin robbery except two pieces of jewelry.

"Shaky Jake" denied that his brother-in-law had anything to do with the crime or that he himself knew anything about it.

Engstrom said he was satisfied a solution of the case had been obtained.

William H. Collins, Shipbuilder, Dies

William H. Collins, 55, vice-president in charge of shipbuilding for the Bethlehem Steel Corp. and a war-time general manager of the Fore River and Hingham shipyards, died early today at a hotel in Beaumont, Tex., according to word received here.

Hailed as one of the foremost shipbuilders of the nation during the war, Collins set numerous records in turning out battleships.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Thelma (Dawson) Collins; a son, William H., Jr., and a grandson, William H., 3d.

A native of Washington, D. C., Collins was graduated from Lafayette College in 1915 and went to work as a helper with the Newport News Shipbuilding Co. In 1937 he was named general manager of the Fore River plant and was named vice-president in January, 1946.

Lois Turns Against Husband, Terms Him 'Never Any Good'

NEVADA CITY, Cal., Jan. 16—Only a few weeks after she had vowed her "undying love" for her third and common-law husband, Joseph L. Hardy, Jr., of Kittery, Me.; Lois Hunt Hardy, 22, former New England girl, wrote her mother that "he never was any good, isn't any good now and never will be any good to anyone or anything."

Lois is now under death sentence in the California gas chamber for her part in the sex-slave slaying of James McLain, a motorist, Hardy goes on trial for McLain's murder Monday.

The letters Lois wrote to her parents from her cell in jail here have revealed the 22-pound girl's changing emotions and her ability to love or hate almost at will. The letters have been published exclusively in the Boston American.

Despite the many stories she told that how she became involved in the crime of which she was convicted, Lois remained constant in her affection for Hardy after her arrest.

"She wrote home that he was 'misunderstood,' and described him as 'an innocent man trying to shield me.'"

But late in November, Hardy escaped jail while waiting trial for murder. He subsequently was recaptured, and Lois revealed how her love for him had changed to hate in a note she penned to her mother, dated Dec. 6. She wrote:

"Dear Mother:

"I started this letter to you much earlier but Mr. Kelly (her lawyer) came so I had to stop. I agree with you concerning Joe. He has definitely made a mess of things for himself, but from now on that is his worry not mine. I only hope I won't have to see him before I go to court."

"Before he pulled this last little trick he had me wrapped around his little finger. But now I see the light. There was a time when no one could say anything against him. I had excuses for every wrong he ever did."

"When I first met him and he told me just got out of jail for stealing a car I dug up in my own mind that he was drunk when he took the car and didn't realize what he was doing."

"When his mother told me he got out of reformatory when he was 19 or 20, I dug up the excuse that his mother was to blame, and when I saw his discharge from the Army I found an excuse. I found an excuse for everything, but it's all over now."

"I have just one thing to say about Joe now, and that is he never was any good, he isn't any good now and he never will be any good to anyone or anything."

"You were saying if I got an acquittal you would like for me to come home. Well, it really sounds wonderful and there isn't anything I could like better, but I am afraid that will just have to be a memory picked away among my souvenirs to take with me to the State Penitentiary."

"I guess they think I am nuts here the way I talk and act as though I were anywhere but in jail. But I have to. I think I would go stark, raving mad if I couldn't pretend there were other people here with me, and that my husband was with men, and pretend he is good like I first thought he was."

"You see, Mother, being here all alone for so damn long with nothing to do but think, you have to live in a make-believe world or else you go nuts."

"Well, I have quite a long story to write out for Mr. Kelly and it is getting late. I think I will close for now, hoping to hear from you again real soon."

"Love,
"LOIS."

Fashion Arbiters Foist Small-Head Look on Women

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

Boston American Fashion Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 16—The new look has rewritten the Biblical story of Samson and Delilah. And instead of the siren shearing the strong man of his hair strength, modern Delilahs are letting the fashion Samsons intrigue them into cutting off their crowning glories, for the limp, lovely and small-head look.

And could we be any different? So now Mugglebee's got the new, new look, but still the same tired old face. After viewing array upon array of irresistible spring clothes. And knowing full well that a new hairdo, a clinging, close cut hairdo, must be part of the new fashion picture, we went out and soon found our gleaming black tresses on the cutting room floor.

CALLED "SHAGGY"

It is called the "Little Rebel" or "Shaggy" haircut and it has taken New York by storm, or should we say by the top of the head, and swept pounds and pounds of hair into the discard.

Probably it was tagged the "Little Rebel" haircut because one must be in a rebellious mood to take the daring step into a darling and demure look. It is a head-snug, short cut hairdo that frames the head and pushes softly over the cheeks in its undulating sweeping around the head.

Hair is strictly out in the open, not hiding under puffs and polls and pinched here and there with hairpins. The hair simply falls closely and softly on the head with casual ringlets provocatively jutting out on the forehead side and the cheeks but remaining close to the back of the neck.

TAKES YEARS OFF AGE

And we'll let you in on a secret. It slices years from the facial age and, as New York hair stylist Jungst whispered, "makes you look approachable." Which is about the best and most accurately descriptive phrase of the entire clothes picture we've heard to date.

The nation's fashion editors are falling in line with this new haircut and followed us in our "head leap." Every day finds a few more press fashionists with the "Little Rebel" or "Shaggy" haircut, girls who are anxious to return to their home towns with something new and provocative for the public to talk about.

Actually this "Little Rebel" haircut movement started in the Maurice Rentner showroom some months ago after creation of the A spicily feminine two-piecers, the models had to redo their own hair to look right for the launching of this new silhouette. So they let themselves be shorn, and the effect was so strikingly stunning, so fetchingly feminine, so honestly young-looking that the haircutting movement really got under way.

The haircut is a natural for the small hats, or for any hat since the vogue is definitely short hair, close to the head.

We think you'll like it. We're delighted with ours. It gives us that gay, glib feeling.

THE GYPSY TOUCH

And now that the "Little Rebel" is firmly ensconced in the fashion picture, let's talk about the gypsy and Samuel Kass' intuitive understanding of the gypsy feeling which he says prevails in the feminine world. Gypsy, of course, is another word for flirtatious, so Samuel Kass this year launches something especially dramatic to meet traditionally the gypsy influence evident each season in his collection.

This spring and summer it is the Nautch skirt, a full circle with puffed cording at the hemline to make it swirl as the wearer walks. This designer uses it in several exotic short dinner dresses of print combined with peasant blouse tops of white organza, sometimes appliqued with cutouts of the print picked out with sequins.

One such, a splashing American rose print, has a square-necked gypsy bolero top with huge puffed white organdy sleeves, an eyestopper for any glance. The country clubs and terraced estates will abound with them, we're sure.

DAYTIME SIMPLICITY

However, for the most part the Kass collection is considerably free from chi chi. He refuses to permit women to get lost in a whirl of the lovely fabrics he employs. So he doesn't bundle her in a cocoon, bury her in a beehive or trip her up in a hobbles skirt.

His daytime dresses are unusually simple, expertly cut. His smooth-contoured suits are arresting in their pursuit of slim, youthful lines. He uses plenty of fine-grained wools that handle like silk to give body but not bulk to the more-dress trend. Again in this collection, as in all others, the slim and the full are an even-steven division in both the daytime and evening group.

The new "signature touch" for Kass this season is the dropped lapel, a small, neat effect of collar and lapel moving downward instead of upward. In many dresses, Kass has a vestee insert of lingerie.

NAVY REPLACES BLACK

If we are going to make this a print spring, Samuel Kass says let the prints be bold and splashy, be seen and appreciated for their exciting and marvelous combinations of colors. A devotee of brown as a spring color for many years, he adds navy to his liking, discarding black.

For real, clean cut American-looking clothes, there is always William Bass, one designer who believes that period pieces belong in the museum. The only influence in his collection is the American influence, young and suave with a feeling of today and tomorrow, and not an indulgence in nostalgic whimsy or theatrical subterfuge.

He sponsors no narrow, sloping shoulders, no breathless waistlines, no hemlines to trip an agile bus boarder.

Jury Hears More on $100,000 Tobin Suit Against Paper

Trial of a $100,000 suit brought against the Boston Herald-Traveler Corp. by James G. Tobin, brother of former Gov. Maurice Tobin, resumed before a 12-man jury in Suffolk Superior Court today.

The jurors, chosen within 10 minutes, were told that three counts are alleged, two based on a story published in two editions of the paper on Feb. 12, 1946, and the third based on a story published March 28, 1945.

Tobin charges the story published in 1945, headed "Clear it with Jimmy—or else," pictures him to the public as "soliciting and receiving bribes for the purpose of obtaining appointments to public office," and that through this story he was "held up to public scorn, contempt and ridicule," with resultant "great distress of body and mind."

Tobin charged that the article printed in two editions of the Herald-Traveler on Feb. 12, 1946, was also libelous. The article, read in full to the jury, contained the following quotation:

"The Massachusetts House sustained late yesterday Gov. Tobin's veto of additional bus service to Logan International Airport after three hours of debate. In which Speaker Frederick B. Willis exposed members of the Governor's personal and political family as being connected with 'a mess that smells, and smells badly.'"

Tobin charged the story conveyed the meaning that Speaker Willis had exposed Tobin, a member of the Governor's personal and political family, as being connected with "the mess that smells, and smells badly."

He charged the statements were false and malicious and were published and circulated by the defendant for the purpose of holding Tobin up to public scorn, contempt and ridicule, and that he has been greatly injured in reputation and has suffered great distress.

Tobin was represented by Aitya, Francis P. Garland and Arthur F. Bickford, and counsel for the Herald-Traveler was Stuart Rand.

New Jury System Would Bar Unfit

Approximately 10 per cent of jurors sent to Suffolk Superior Court by the Boston Election Commission have been found to have criminal records, a member of the Judicial Council declared today in urging establishment of a jury commissioner system.

The Council, in its 23d annual report to Gov. Bradford today, recommended legislation for appointment of jury commissioners in Suffolk, Middlesex and Norfolk counties as a means of taking politics out of jury selections.

"The Boston election commissioners are supposed to determine the eligibility of jurors after investigating their character and fitness for duty. Yet we find approximately 10 per cent of the jurors sent to the courthouse have criminal records," the member stated.

The council report recommended a tryout of the jury commissioner system of selecting jurors in the three counties, stating it would be "wiser to try out the plan in a part of the Metropolitan area rather than one statewide basis."

The report also discussed the rising cost of the administration of justice and pointed out that annually approximately 99 per cent of the people are called upon to help finance the litigation of the minute percentage of the population instigating court action.

As a means of reducing the burden for taxpayers as a whole, the report recommended increases in the fees for entering cases and proposed the use of 6-men juries. The present law allows 6-man juries only in sanity cases in probate courts and in trials of exal psychopaths.

The council proposed that a $15 fee be paid by persons claiming a jury of 12 and a $5 fee for those asking a jury of 6.

Free Press, Radio Soviet Roadblock

Soviet plans for world domination could only be conquered by direct use of free speech, a free press and a free radio, two speakers at the Printing and Publishing dinner at the Copley-Plaza re-emphasized today.

Maj. Gen. Frederick H. Osborn,
U. S. atomic energy official, said America and other democratic nations would have to blast aside the Soviet iron curtain if a third world war was to be averted.

Cong. John F. Kennedy warned that America was woefully neglecting her public relations with other peoples of the world.

"We are still sleeping while civilization hangs in the balance," he said. "Russia is today
using the same propaganda technique Goebbels used to rouse the German people to war in the 1930s."

Savoy Schools Closed Until Mid-March

SAVOY, Jan. 16.—Because this Berkshire community is snowbound at this season, the 48 pupils in grade school began their annual winter vacation today and will not return to classes until mid-March.

But the youngsters make up for the vacation by putting in as many more days in summer

National Can Corp. Acquires Bay State Firm

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (AP)—B.
D. Beamish, president of National Can Corp., said today the company has acquired the stock interest of David Berdon and Associates in the Universal Boring Machine Co., Hudson, Mass., and now owns all issued stock and outstanding stock of the Massachusetts concern, which is being operated as a subsidiary.

Present plans, Beamish said, are to continue to manufacture boring mills as well as can-making and other machinery.

HOOVER IN MIAMI

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., Jan. 16
(AP)—Former Pres. Herbert
Hoover arrived here today for a short stay preparatory to his annual fishing trip in the Florida
Keys.

Hard impacted wax plugging up ear canals and preventing outside ear drums from vibrating makes your hearing less keen.

To remove it, a wax obstruction that interferes with normal hearing and may cause severe irritation use Ear Drops.
Drops are absorbed. They are safe and complete a complete hygiene program for the

Drives 2 Stolen Buses Into Ditch

AMITE, La., Jan. 16 (INS).—A Philadelphia youth showed persistence but little success in operating two Greyhound buses he admittedly stole "to see how it would be to drive one of those big things."

Worry of FALSE TEETH

Slipping or Irritating?

Don't be embarrassed by loose false teeth slipping, dropping or wobbling when you eat, talk or laugh. Just use a little PASTEETH on your plates. This pleasant powder gives a remarkable sense of added comfort and security by holding plates more firmly. No gums, goss, pasty taste or feeling. It's ashine (non-acid). Get PASTEETH at any drug store.

erating two Greyhound buses he admittedly stole "to see how it would be to drive one of those big things."

The youth, Frank Pappy, 20, took one bus at Kentwood, La., and drove along for seven miles—picking up customers along the way—before it went into a ditch.

Then Pappy decided to make another stab at it. He told Sheriff James W. Daniel at St. Francisville, La., after his arrest, he drove the second bus about 80 miles before it, too, "somehow" ran into a ditch. He was being held on charges of stealing two buses.

Auto Mogul Asks Low Cost Bonds as Inflation Check

TORONTO, Jan. 16 (AP).—President Paul G. Hoffman of the Studebaker Corp. of South Bend, Ind., said in an address that the U. S. is undergoing "one of the three greatest inflations we have ever known."

He told the Empire Club that the restoration of wartime controls would not solve the problem. Lowering prices to a level which would result in the purchase of long-term government bonds might help, he said, and possibly would be all that was needed to check further expansion of bank credits.

Sisters of St. Francis Seek $300,000 Damages

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 16 (INS).—Claims against the state of New York for more than $200,000 top the calendar of the court of claims for the term beginning in Albany, Jan. 26.

Largest is that of missionary sisters of the third order of St.

Francis. They seek $300,000 in damages for alleged permanent appropriation of land for highway construction in Highland Falls, N. Y.

Dolores Moran Dates Stork

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
 HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 16 — Dolores Moran, blonde motion picture star, and Ben Bogeaue have made a date with the stork for June.

This is the most surprising news in a long time, as they were virtually on the point of separating six months ago. They are now in New York but are leaving immediately for Cuba where they will spend a month.

Bogeaue, former owner of the General Service Studios, is one of the best known independent producers in Hollywood.

The last screen appearance of Mrs. Bogeaue was in one of her husband's pictures, "A Miracle Can Happen." She is one of Hollywood's most beautiful young women.

Parade of Girls Opens Boston 'Dimes' Drive

Highlighted by a procession of glamorous girl models through downtown Boston, with Harvard students as their escorts, in banner-bedecked hansom cabs, the annual March of Dimes for the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis got under way today.

Denis W. Delaney, chairman of the local campaign, announced that Suffolk County was "grateful for an all-out effort this year as never before" in the drive for funds to aid in the care of infantile paralysis victims, which will continue through Jan. 31.

He said that even containers have been placed in business houses, public gathering places and schoolrooms for the convenience of donors.

One hundred professional models from the Hart Agency who have volunteered as official campaign collectors will be stationed at March of Dimes stands in hotel lobbies and restaurants throughout the city.

Vice-chairman of the local campaign is Charles E. Kurtzman, northeastern division manager of Loeb's, Inc., assisted by Mrs. Harold G. Kern, chairman of women's activities; George Swartz, Boston insurance executive, chairman of the Donors' Dinner, and Asst. U. S. Atty. Edward D. Hansen, chairman of the Memorial Ball.

STAR GIVES $1500
Delaney announced a contribution of $1500 to the Suffolk County Chapter from Vic Damone, radio singing star featured in the east-coast network, "Saturday Night Serenade," representing his fee for personal appearances at both the $100-Donors' Dinner and the Memorial Ball, highlights of the local drive, both scheduled for Jan. 29 at the Hotel Somerset and Boston Garden, respectively.

CLOTHING RATION ENDS
LLELLE, Jan. 16 (AP)—Rationing of clothing was abolished in Erie today. An official announcement said virtually all restrictions on importation of clothing and textiles were being removed. Price controls, however, will remain.

Theory UMT Defies Tradition Spiked by American Legion

Special to the Boston Evening American
NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—It is ridiculous to say universal military training is "against all American tradition," says an article in the current issue of the American Legion magazine. The author points out such a claim is often made by critics of proposed American defense measures.

The article, by W. H. B. Smith, the magazine's arms expert, cites colonial records to prove general military training "plus instruction in the care and use of weapons," is about the oldest tradition in America. It points out well-meaning critics who raise the "tradition" cry "just don't know enough about the history of their country," and adds:

"Our educational system today does not deal very thoroughly with the facts of our early days."

"The patterns of American greatness were being laid down then by the thoughts and deeds of the founding fathers. We can learn many lessons from those patterns."

Records of all the American colonies disclose every citizen was called upon to play an active part in both defense and peace—defense, it is pointed out.

The age range for military service during colonial days generally was from 16 to 60 for all males. Severe penalties were enforced for failure to respond for service, and lesser penalties were imposed if arms and ammunition were not found in good condition upon inspection.

The article related a Massachusetts training act of 1637 exempted from military drill the president, fellows and students of Harvard University, "common lawyers, magistrates and their deputies, officers of ships of over 20 tons, herdsmen, millers and such others as the courts decided fit."

"This fact shows an awareness of the general needs which might well guide some current thinking, particularly when we remember that because of the indiscriminate drafting of science students in World War II we are suffering today from a severe need for technical help and instructions to carry out our research programs."

The heating oil supply situation is critical. Unless you and all other users of heating oil burn 15% less than normal during January, February and March, your home may be cold! Today the industry's production is the greatest in history—BUT—still not enough to meet the record demand. To save your 15%, take these steps now: Set thermostat at 68°... turn down to 60° at night or when away... keep radiators off in all unused rooms... use fireplace whenever possible—keep flues closed when not in use.

28 RUSH BIGGEST TAX CUT

THE LEGISLATIVE Committee on Legal Affairs, headed by Senator Edward M. Rowe of Cambridge, is expected to render a favorable report on the Community Property law within a few days.

The Committee will thus pave the way for the greatest tax reduction in Massachusetts history.

Never before was a legislative body able to accomplish so much for the people.

Never before was the need for prompt and decisive action so great.

Serving on the Committee with Senator Rowe are: Senator Richard H. Lee of Newton, Senator J. Elmer Callahan of Salem, Senator Michael A. Flanagan of Lawrence, Rep. Louis Lobel of Boston, Rep. George Greene of Roxbury, Rep. Earle S. Tyler of Watertown, Rep. Talbot T. Tweedy of Taunton, Rep. Oscar J. Cahoon of Harwich, Rep. Thomas E. Key of Winthrop, Rep. Charles Kaplan of Boston, Rep. Charles J. Artesani of Boston, Rep. Ernest W. Dullea of Roxbury and Rep. Michael Paul Feeney of Hyde Park.

As soon as the Community Property law is enacted by the Legislature and signed by Governor Bradford, the Federal income taxes of Massachusetts people will be slashed at the rate of $200 a minute, $12,000 an hour, $300,000 a day, $2,100,000 a week, $8,500,000 a month and $100,000,000 a year.

The cost of living will be lowered $100,000,000 a year.

Ruinous inflation will be curbed to the great satisfaction of all persons.

Employment will be tremendously stimulated.

The $100,000,000 which the Federal Government has been siphoning UNNECESSARILY and UNFAIRLY from the bank accounts and savings of Massachusetts people WILL STAY IN MASSACHUSETTS.

AS WE HAVE SAID many times, the Legislative Committee on Legal Affairs cannot afford to delay its report on the Community Property law.

Every day that Committee devotes to a superfluous consideration of this law which has already been thoroughly investigated for six months, obliges the people of Massachusetts to pay $300,000 MORE to the Federal Government.

Tax debts pile up very rapidly at the rate of $300,000 a day, and soon it would be found that the people had been put to a needless and utterly indefensible ADDITIONAL expense of $10,000,000.

We do not think that Senator Rowe, Senator Lee, Senator Callahan, Representative Cahoon, Representative Key and the other members of the Committee want to burden the people of Massachusetts unnecessarily, particularly not in this era of dollar-a-pound butter and prohibitively expensive meat.

For that good reason, we expect them to act on the Community Property law without further waiting.

None of them, we are confidently certain, would wish to deprive the people of the ONLY OPPORTUNITY OF TAX REDUCTION in the current session of the Legislature.

IT IS FOOLISH, and very probably futile, for any member of the Legislature to suggest postponing action on the Community Property law until Congress disposes of Split Tax proposals.

The legislator who makes such a suggestion asks the people of Massachusetts to engage in a $100,000,000 tax cut gamble, and, judging from the utterances of President Truman and various Congressional leaders, they would wind up with NO TAX REDUCTION WHATSOEVER.

In any event, they would be forced to pay $300,000 A DAY MORE to the Federal Government while Congress was trying to pass some kind of tax bill.

The ONLY WAY that the people of Massachusetts can be sure of a substantial tax cut this year is to have their own Legislature enact the Community Property law AT ONCE.

But if true lips have said to me:

—PHOEBE CARY

IT HAS ALWAYS BEEN my claim the average twin bed is too small for the six-footer type husband. I have argued the beds of married couples, if they want separate beds, should not be the same size. The husband should have a large bed and his cute, little wife a small bed. Now I note an expert on sleep says to get the most rest out of a night's slumber the sleeper should toss around a lot. That is, change sleeping positions. I ask you, how can a six-foot guy, weighing 190 to 200 pounds, toss around in a twin bed? He needs one of those new kingsize beds.

PASSING BY — Groucho Marx. One of the country's most brilliant and versatile comedians.

Did you catch him in the film Copacabana? He rolled me in the aisles with his performance in that opus especially when he sang "Go West, Young Man". . . . Marlene Dietrich. Dean of cinema "gophers." The much-traveled Marlene always carries four or five St. Christopher medals with her. St. Christopher is the patron saint of travelers. Carrying his medals is supposed to insure a safe journey.

YOUNG COUPLE — Wonder how Mr. and Mrs. Miller Mitchell of Chelsea, Mass., are getting along? My interest was aroused in this couple about a year ago when I read Mr. Mitchell had become a proud father at the age of 14, and Mrs. Mitchell a happy mania at the age of 15. If I have any readers in Chelsea, Mass., who know the Miller Mitchells I would be pleased to hear how the young people are doing.

FORGETTING — People forgetting names or other things they should know well often say: "I must be getting old, I'm losing my memory." Nothing to that belief. Occasionally forgetting things like that is really the sign of an active mind. Occasionally the busy brain automatically takes a brief rest, hence the temporary lapse in memory.

ASIDES — In 1905 the long name champion of Chicago was a citizen named James J. Papathodorokoumountouragiotopolous. I don't know the name of the present titleholder. . . . Recent report reveals there are over a million and a half cats in New York city. That's a lot of cats. The felines should be required to be licensed same as dogs.

PLEASE NOTE — Inasmuch as there is some discussion as to what "Jersey Joe" Walcott should receive in his next bout with Joe Louis, it may be interesting to recall that in the first Dempsey-Tunney bout, the champion (Dempsey) received $711,888 and Tunney (the challenger), $204,000. In the second bout Tunney (the champion) received $990,445 and Dempsey (the challenger) $425,000. In those days not only was the income tax much lower but a dollar had three times as much buying power as it has today.

IN MAINE — Ever done any traveling in Maine? Beautiful state. Especially the summertime. I played summer baseball for two seasons at Kimo, Me., on Moosehead Lake. But what I started to tell you was that if you travel in Maine don't play poker there. Well, not for high stakes. According to the Maine law a wife can sue to recover the money her husband loses in a poker game.

HISTORICAL NOTE — Is there a corset named after Catherine de Medici? There should be. Especially at this time when the so-called "wasp-waist" style corset is trying a comeback. Catherine wore the first corset and it was a waist-jacket job. When wearing this corset her waist measured 13 inches. Or so say the historians.

FAVORITES — What was the favorite overture and the favorite exit march of vaudeville theater orchestra leaders of the yesteryear? When asked that, I said the overture favorite was "Poet and Peasant" and the exit march favorite, "Stars and Stripes Forever." Was I right? Incidentally, "Stars and Stripes Forever" earned over $300,000 in royalties for John Philip Sousa, the composer. Sousa sold the rights of the almost equally popular "Washington Post March" for $35.

ASKING Queries from clients. Q — You claim the first football forward pass was thrown by a Wesleyan man. A nationally circulated magazine claims coach Eddie Coughlin introduced forward pass at St. Louis University in 1907. Who's right? A — My claim still is the first forward pass thrown in college football game was tossed by Moore of Wesleyan to Van Tassel of same team in a game against Yale in 1906.

FAIR ENOUGH

By WESTBROOK PEGLER

Copyright, 1945, King Features Syndicate

RALPH W. GWINN, of New York, who ran an inquiry into the cost of new housing by a subcommittee of Congress, came back to the House of Representatives with an interim report which confirms the fact that the worst predators on the workers of the United States are some of the workers themselves.

Through various unions which always have been parasitic rackets Westbrook Pegler but, for a long time, were wasteful in their tatters, the tinker and the sawyer, the digger and the mason prey on all the others who need homes.

They spoil expensive material and they nonchalantly botch work thus wasting hundreds of thousands of hours worth never less than $1 an hour and often as much as $5.

THE AGENTS of the building unions will resent the statement of these well-known truths with letters to the editor. However, I personally, never did pay them any heed.

The fact is recognized that some of the building unions are a blight on the social and moral life of the country, a burden on the earnings of all the people and a spirochete in the economic bloodstream.

By their extortions, in the guise of wages and working rules, they have been more responsible for the shortage of housing than any other factor, including even the smug suburban corruption of the dealers in materials.

This has prolonged the period of crowding and strain far beyond any reasonable necessity. The few new quarters which have slowly risen since the war actually are the first appreciable additions to our general domicile since 1933, when the Roosevelt depression made permanent the cyclical Hoover slump.

They were so long a building, however, that the blue sink and laundry tub had given way to pink and the pink to yellow by the time the first occupants got in.

These lucky nesters naturally were political selectees, as the new copy-desk idiom has it.

THE REQUIRED RENT is only a fraction of the actual cost, the rest being concealed in subsidies borne by the people, including, be it noted, the fellows who laid the brick and got the outlandish wages.

The lag in housing has been going on since 1929 and we are now almost two decades in arrears in a nation where depredation is fast owing to the rapacity of the artisans, contractors and speculators which makes for flimsy building in the first place.

A 20-year-old house is still in the shakedown phase in Europe, barring war. But in the United States it is obsolete, grimy with soot, defiled with the love-lyrics of adolescents writ in imperishable chalk and well on its way to the slums.

As Mr. Gwin reported for the record, the unions run up the cost of building artificially, and unnecessarily and without the slightest eventual benefit to the employees who draw this pay.

To be sure, there is an illusion of wealth in an envelope holding $149.88, including arbitrary overtime, featherbedding and, in many cases, portal-to-portal and mileage graft.

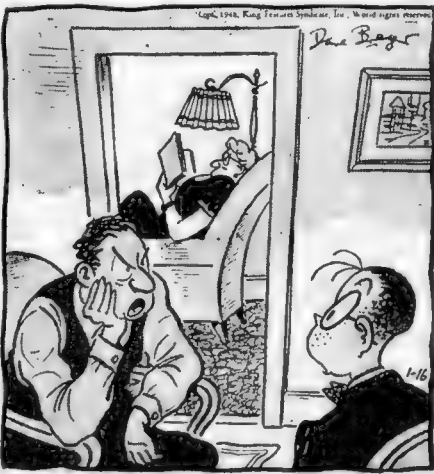

But the Internal Revenue will catch up with most of these wicked rich, and even if they should escape they will pay the inflationary rate for butter, eggs and meat and for the rent of their own housing. In fine they are broke.

The working stiff, drawing from two to three times his normal and reasonable pay for full employment, should have the sense not to cry out against inflation, for he is only howling down his own absurd wages.

MR. GWINN'S REPORT said that after hearing 80 witnesses and examining many cases, his subcommittee had established that unions, by themselves or in combination with contractors and suppliers of materials, have monopolized construction in many whole cities and some areas extending well beyond the cities.

"In nearly all our big cities," he said, "unions bosses determine where and when the building craftsman shall work, if at all; what his pay shall be and who shall be allowed to join. That makes workmen scarce and forces wages up. The monopoly of workers is complete. To exclude new craftsmen and apprentices from their city is one of the regular functions of many unions. A single union can make men slow down, featherbed, walk off, stand by, boycott or strike. This fact has enfolded both builders and distributors in such a fear that they pay the union boss his price for the promise that he will refrain from exercising his arbitrary power."

"An obligation of membership in the Carpenters' Union was to refrain from attending meetings for the purpose of criticizing union officials or representatives, except at the regular meetings, under penalty of expulsion. This restriction of freedom of speech and assembly is practically universal in the building trades."

" . . . And then the court awarded me custody of my mother-in-law!"

Hollywood

Copyright, 1948, International News Service

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 16—Patrice Munsell, the glamorous girl of the Metropolitan Opera Company, who was sought at the time of her debut by several of the major companies will sign a contract with the Rouben Mamoulian for one of the top roles in "Bright Destination."

Patrice Munsell

When Patrice arrives here Jan. 27 for a concert at the Philharmonic, she will put her name on the contract which Rouben has ready for her. The terms have all been agreed upon.

Oddly enough, she plays a dramatic role and only sings one aria, and that will be while she is floating through the air "with the greatest of ease" as a trapeze artist. Not since the day of Geraldine Farrar has there been an opera star with the glamor of 15-year-old Patrice.

VICTOR MATURE will be on the RKO lot this summer, first time since 1942. He has been borrowed from 20th Century-Fox to star in "Mr. Whiskers." That will make three pictures for Vic within a very short time. "The Band of Burnside Creek" and "The Coast for Martin Rouben" are now in the works.

In "Mr. Whiskers" he plays a foreigner who breaks the law and gets mixed up with the Union. Son, and it's then he realizes the error of his ways.

Sid Rappaport steps out of his executive post temporarily to produce this story, an original by Edwin C. Lewis.

POOR JEFFERY LYNN is certainly playing in bad luck. He's out of his last reported picture since he left the Army. "Let's Fall in Love" at Columbia. Jeffery came down with virus X and he'll fill it in for Columbia to wait for him to get better.

No one was working on the company on Wednesday, because Douglas Sirk, the director, also had the flu but his nose wasn't so sore and so he returned yesterday.

Don Ameche, one of the most successful stars in town, is that I have to say soon may pass anything but a corking performance, is coming with "Johnny Lammour." He replaced Jeffery Lynn.

ANN RICHARDS, Australian actress who returned to Hollywood after a visit in New York.

By Louella O. Parsons

has said she will play no more spinster roles.

When she was met by the Paramount publicity man in Chicago, he walked up to her and said, "Can you tell me if Ann Richards was on that train?"

"What does she look like?" asked Ann.

"Well, she's a middle-aged woman," he said.

So from now on it will be nothing but glamour girl roles for Ann, who off screen is young and beautiful. She is here for "Sorry, Wrong Number" for Hal Wallis. This is the picture in which Barbara Stanwyck is starred.

CHATTER IN HOLLYWOOD: Merle Oberon won't be making movies for some months, because she and Lucien Ballard are sailing on the Queen Elizabeth Feb. 4 for Switzerland. They are making the trip with Ann and Henry Ford III, whom they met at Sun Valley.

Merle and Lucien, who are taking their car, plan to motor through Italy, taking the trip slowly and stopping at all the picturesque small towns. My favorite doctor and I did the same thing in 1937, and it was one of the most enjoyable summers I ever spent. Italy has made the greatest comeback of any of the war-torn countries, and I can imagine nothing better than a motor trip in the spring through its countryside.

In the audience at the Academy Awards last night Sunday was Florence Vidor, seeing herself for the first time in "The Patriot" made 24 years ago.

For once who had a real heartbreak when she separated from Jessica Hertz after a marriage of 15 years. Jack won't see "The Patriot" because she had to make a picture in the last 24 hours of her life.

Paul Jennings and Lloyd Hamilton were in the picture, and Jennings was so good, I wish he hadn't been with the Nazis during the war.

SNAPSHOTS OF HOLLYWOOD: collected at Lillian Hellman's party with Dr. Haecher, Hollywood psychiatrist. She is so nice I could recognize her and made a bet with Lillian Hellman that I could recognize her. But it was—she is so nice I could recognize her. But it was—she is so nice I could recognize her.

Errol Flynn is reported much sicker than is being admitted.

David Selznick at a table for two with beautiful model Candy

Toxin at the Mocambo last night—that is, I think she is a model.

The battling Harry Cushing is back in Hollywood, and apparently getting along much better than before they took off for the East to his family.

What a coincidence that the Darryl Zanuck and the Walter Wangers have the same wedding anniversary. They are celebrating with a dinner at Le Pupillon. Walter's gift to Joan (Bennett) was a miniature gold figure of a girl with a flower in her hair. Studied with rubies.

Speaking of "joints"—Juliana Stanwyck will wear $20,000 worth of diamonds in "Sorry, Wrong Number" several times over her own.

Chili Williams, the polka dot queen, with Jay Gould at the Fox and Hounds last night.

Marlene Dietrich is a devoted friend and she's proving it by the fact she is trying to get her friend Lin Markey, launched on a movie career. The girls met during USO tours during the war and Marlene thinks Lin is a wonderful comedienne.

Doris Lilly is telling her friends of going to marry Carlos Borra, a good looking export executive, in the spring. Wonder if it's true (I hope it is) that Jane Wyman and Ronnie Reagan didn't get together at a quiet cafe the other night.

Howard Hawks with Deanna Best at Santa Anita. The scene is a theme with Howard. He is producing Deanna for one of his own pictures.

Twelve days at El Rancho Hotel in Las Vegas are Betty Grable and Harry James. They had a party yesterday when the truth is that they were so tired they had to go to bed after seven hours.

I thought the Tumbler Fox Susanna Foster romance was odd. But they were together at the party.

Tony Martin for the time being at least is continuing music to Joan Barton. They have date after date.

Thor Cassani (Cholly Knickerbocker) and his attractive look will blossom at the Casa Marina Hotel in Key West. They are partying Jan. 21.

Jack Dempsey and Marlene Matlowe, tennis champion, having dinner at the Beverly Towers.

Monica Chevalier and Frank Borzage lunched about a movie before Maurice took off for New York. Jeffery he will make a musical for Frank.

AND INCIDENTALLY, the representatives had notice the day before that the bill was coming up for discussion and action.

Their excuse will be that they were in favor of the theory behind the bill and were ready to be called the minute there was a vote on the question—which, by the way, would represent the first change in our military justice laws in more than twenty years.

The Elston Bill "permits enlisted men to serve on courts-martial" for the first time in our history—which is a pretty shameful admission in itself. But much has been made of that point. However, it sets the number of enlisted men at "one-third of the total membership of the court."

In a civilian court system, that might mean a lot because the jury must be unanimous in its decision. Unfortunately, in military courts-martial, a simple majority is all that is required in all but the most extreme cases. Thus, in roughly 90 per cent of cases, the presence of enlisted men in the CONGRESSMAN JOHN F. KENNEDY is in Boston. And just in time to receive an unkind blow from the N. E. branch office of the Veterans' Administration . . .

John, the VA has fired Tommy Broderick. Sometime today, the story will be told you by high officials of our veterans' organizations . . . In brief, here it is: Tommy, of course, made many speeches for your successful campaign for Congress as one of our war heroes. You wanted him appointed and he was, because he was qualified. He was made assistant canteen manager at Cushing Veterans Hospital, Framingham. Dr. Gasser, head of Cushing (and incidentally he sailed with this communist for France in 1918), is for Tommy. So are the members of the Paraplegics Association, those unfortunate paralyzed veterans. . . . So is his boss in the canteen, Tommy Broderick, is 50 per cent disabled. But Frank MacKenzie, chief of the VA canteen service area here. Because Tommy would not accept transfer to Northampton Hospital, some 100 miles away.

NOW the reason Tommy would not accept transfer is that he lives with a mother and supports her. As we understand it, transfer cannot be made, under the Veterans Preference Law, unless the veteran approves. So, Tommy, who is senior vice-commander of Oak Sq. Post, VFW, complained to that organization. And word was passed to the Disabled American Veterans. On Monday the united front of the veterans' organizations met, under Chairman Tony Tisco of the DAV, and may file a complaint with Congress. . . . These positions are not under Civil Service. But they are protected by laws relating to veterans. There are those in the Veterans Administration who believe that the "bumped" Tommy was a man to be kept. Your friends, John.

SUCH an interesting subject is that the VA and the Veterans' Administration are in a bit of a jam. They have a man, Fred, who is a member of the plant B. I. and T. Co. But every now and then something happens out of that man's brain about would markets. A pretty name, too. Let's call it "Fred." Fred is a man who is a member of the Veterans' Administration. He is a man who is a member of the Veterans' Administration. He is a man who is a member of the Veterans' Administration.

It would have been simple to have legislated that, when an enlisted man was on trial at least half the court's personnel be enlisted men.

But the real irony is that, under the terms of the bill, there need not be any enlisted men on the court unless their presence is requested by the enlisted man on trial, "in writing prior to the convening of the court." And of course, since the accused would be under guard and unable to circulate, such a "written request" would have to go through officers' channels to the unit commander.

And if it just happened to get lost, who would be the wisest?

AFTER WATCHING several hundred such cases, at home and overseas, during the war, my guess is that such "written requests" will be almost always get lost, if the commanding officer wished, or if someone along the line felt it would be wisest.

Agassi) has translated Jackie's into French. . . . At the Rio recently we heard the Eddie Watson trio in a mellow arrangement of "I'm a Fool for You." Jack has written special numbers for George Frier, Supra Maxa, Rosenbloom, Josephine Deanna, Belle Baker, Countess Lee Morris. We have at least two Boston teachers who find an escape in song. Well, maybe we're wrong about that. Could it be research in romance and interesting music?

BOSTON'S first subway and trolley line was from Boston and Arlington sts. to Park st., according to Leo Goulet. At Park st. the trolley car made the loop as early as 1891. So this day one day, during a study period, Leo's team sent him to the Tremont Temple to pick up some letters. The subway was under construction at that time and the excavation was covered with boards of English and Tremont. . . . As Leo came out of the theater, there was an explosion under the street and a surface car was blown up. Leo's team was in the car. Leo's team was in the car. Leo's team was in the car.

In earlier years, more cars used to have a "Tremont" sign. Leo says, "I don't know, sometimes I see an old car with a 'Tremont' sign. I don't know, sometimes I see an old car with a 'Tremont' sign. I don't know, sometimes I see an old car with a 'Tremont' sign."

CONGRESS should have a committee on the period of the war. Veterans may have a special committee. Congress should have a committee on the period of the war. Veterans may have a special committee.

OLD LOVE: Peter Leon, manager of Ruby Foot, is never happier than when Elbie Fletcher, Eddie Waitkus or some other ballplayer drops in. Peter was the Chinese shortstop of the Boston Latin nine about 10 years ago. He said wanted him to be a doctor. Instead, he went to work at the Navy Yard, catching red-hot piers. One day the fellow threw them let go a wild one. It barely missed Peter's head, buried itself in a pole. "Here," said Peter, "you catch, I'll pitch." . . . Later Peter became a welder. Elbie and Ruby took him on at her N. Y. opening to weld friendships.

Assignment: America

By Kenneth L. Dixon

WASHINGTON, Jan. 16 (INS)—"You can talk about military justice until you're blue in the face," said Glen Johnson. "But I have served both as prosecuting and as defense attorney in countless court-martial cases—and I can tell you that, compared to civilian justice, military justice is a joke!"

Johnson is a Democratic Congressman from Okemah, Okla. If you're curious about his experience as a civilian lawyer, he has the right to practice before the United States Supreme Court.

If you wonder about his military background, take a look at his war record. He resigned from the Oklahoma State Legislature early in 1942 to enlist in the Army. He served more than a year as an enlisted man, went to officers' candidate school and eventually emerged from the Army a captain.

During his four years in uniform, the young colon, who is serving his first term in Congress, was in the military intelligence service and then in the Judge Advocate General's department. He spent some two years overseas.

THUS, ALTHOUGH only 36 he probably was the best-equipped man in the House of Representatives to discuss the Elston Bill to revise the Army's court-martial system. And at the moment, that's what he was seeking to do.

He was trying to explain the necessity for an amendment which would require the presiding officer to cite certain basic phases of constitutional law to the entire court-martial personnel, prior to the start of any given trial. It would have insured that the accused knew his rights—not to mention insuring that his "jury and judges" also knew something about legal procedure.

The amendment was defeated, after a couple of Republican ex-officers got up and said it wasn't necessary. The vote was something like 30 to 22, or near that, which meant that less than one-sixth of the representatives were even interested enough in improving military justice.

AND INCIDENTALLY, the representatives had notice the day before that the bill was coming up for discussion and action.

Their excuse will be that they were in favor of the theory behind the bill and were ready to be called the minute there was a vote on the question—which, by the way, would represent the first change in our military justice laws in more than twenty years.

The Elston Bill "permits enlisted men to serve on courts-martial" for the first time in our history—which is a pretty shameful admission in itself. But much has been made of that point. However, it sets the number of enlisted men at "one-third of the total membership of the court."

Fitchburg Police Shakeup Due, Secrecy Maintained

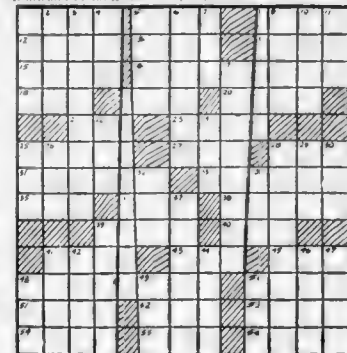

FITCHBURG, Jan. 16 (Police Chief Carlisle F. Taylor has received orders from Mayor George W. Stanton to effect "sweeping changes" in the department by Monday, but neither the mayor nor the chief would disclose in advance the moves contemplated.

The department has been badly undermanned for years and has undergone several changes since Chief Taylor took office several months ago. Six new lieutenants were recently confirmed, leaving the force without a sergeant. Sixteen patrolmen were appointed last month.

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE, Beauty and Fashion Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Dorine McKay, one of this big town's most photogenic lovelies . . . you've seen her pictured repeatedly in the glamor fashion magazines . . . and a top model on Hattie Carnegie's fashion runway, lives on a schedule that's virtually a LOOK DIET.

She has her slim, willowy but feminine figure for keeps. She must fit in her stock in trade . . . or how else could she prominently in fashion exquisites for a spotlight designer house that "moderates on clothes, perfects on figure."

"Of course I diet, regularly," she said, when we spoke to her between shows. Dorine is a brilliant brunette with flashing dark eyes, a camellia-smooth skin, a slim but not starve-it-looking body as is sometimes the way with runway model.

WHAT SHE EATS

Dorine is five feet six and a half inches tall and weighs 113, but doesn't look as though she weighs more than 112. Her waistline measures 23½ inches, her bust, 34 inches, and her hips, 31 inches. An ideal clothes model, she is an ideal for femininity in any language. She carries herself regally and looks even taller. That is because good posture creates an illusion of greater height.

And what does Dorine eat? That's what you are interested in, of course. It is a fallacy to presume models slave themselves into slenderness. They could not possibly do that and maintain the requisite energy it requires to stand up and "take it" . . . The continuous glances of editors and buyers . . . for hours at a time. The model's job is a hard one . . . Rough and tough on their nerves, as well. For they must always look handbox perfect . . . Look as though they were queens of all they surveyed . . . Look as though they belonged to the beautiful clothes they are showing.

Dorine is a vital, smiling girl . . . one of the best models in the business. And this is what she eats, she told me.

"For breakfast I always have fruit of one kind or another, but it must be fresh fruit, in season as well. Occasionally I have an egg, or a slice of toast. And, of course, coffee, but without sugar or cream. Black coffee is extremely palatable once you acquire the taste for it," Dorine McKay confided.

STEAK FOR DINNER

"Usually a green salad, fruit and coffee comprise my luncheon. If I feel particularly reckless I add a slice of very, very thin, crisp toast, unbuttered, to the menu. Or in winter, when it is extremely cold, I take a cup of clear broth, always clear."

"The great big juicy steak is my nightly dinner routine." Or it could be lamb chops. A few vegetables and a salad and that's it. For dessert it is always fresh fruit or a compote. It is just as easy to eat a fruit for a sweet finishing touch as it is something gooey. That is a lesson the model learns early in her career . . . To develop the fruit-for-dessert habit. And once acquired, it is a cinch to continue."

DINNER

-  2-3 cup broccoli

This routine soon is very much like Mugglebee's NEW LOOK DIET, wouldn't you say? It is a known fact that this sort of diet is basic for health as well as for body-slim-beauty. And it keeps the vitality always on a high level, without fraying the nerves and increasing tension.

We don't ask you to trim your figure down to a model's proportions. But if you want to look new in your new clothes . . . if you want to make them count then make the figure count for half the appearance. Trim your figure to what is correct for you, your bone-structure, your height and your age. It may bring you to a model's outline . . . but, at any rate, it will bring you to a healthier and happier silhouette.

If you'd like to know what your correct weight should be . . . contingent on your frame, age and height, we'll gladly send it to you if you write the Beauty Department, care of the Boston American. A complete chart will be yours to keep for future reference.

In tomorrow's Boston American, we'll tell you what a noted New York figure revampers says about waistlines.

CUTE TRICK . . . that's what Jeff Donnell looks like . . . and like her there are a few million other American cute tricks and chicks similarly garbed strutting down the avenue or Main street. Tomorrow's adult beauties . . . they are learning the art of putting. Their best face forward . . . a trick which comes from delving into the past and coming up with the beauty trick of the ancient lovelies . . . using milk-based cosmetics that reward them with milk-and-honey complexion.

Excellent Beauty Routine With All Benefits of Milk

AT THE PRESENT COST, we'd hesitate to recommend A milk baths as beauty treatments, popular as they were in ancient times. But we should like to tell you about an excellent routine for the skin which is based on the beneficial effects of pure, fresh milk.

One cosmetic house . . . and one only . . . has taken a page from the book of the ancients, and in the preparation of their cosmetics, they have used milk as a base, with just the right proportion of beneficial oils to cleanse and soften the skin.

In the beauty routine they recommend, there are three steps . . . the first of which is cleansing the skin . . . done with a cleansing milk, but not right after the makeup, but never massaged. Rinsing is the second step . . . with clear water and a face cloth . . . warm water if the skin is oily, tepid water, if dry. This leaves the skin fresh and tingling with cleanliness.

The third step is the application of a rich emulsion . . . one-tenth milk, the remainder rich, skin-softening oils . . . which restores oil to the skin lost by frequent washings.

As a smooth, make-up base, you'll love it, because it stays on for hours. And for women who dislike going to bed with greasy skin, this is an ideal preparation . . . it disappears as soon as applied.—R. M.

For the name of this beauty-in-three-steps treatment, phone Beauty Dept., Liberty 2-4000, any day except Sunday; or write to Ruth Mugglebee, care of the Boston American, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Gifts From Divorced Husband's Kin

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN: Last summer I was granted a divorce and the custody of my two children. Of course my ex-husband's sister and brother took his side, insisted that I should not be given the custody of the children, and since the divorce have not spoken to me.

At Christmas-time they both sent each of the children very beautiful and expensive presents. I am determined that my children shall not accept gifts from people who don't speak to me, but I know they will be heart-broken if I take these gifts away from them. How can I explain this situation to them, how can I return the gifts, and how can I make my decision clear to my ex-in-laws?

MARGARET M

Please do not impulsively do anything now (when you have so recently been hurt and have not yet, and quite understandably, regained your self-control and poise) that you will regret later. The sister and brother of your children's father are their family, their aunt and uncle, and you should be so generous and forward-looking in your thinking that you will not even consider depriving your children of the devotion and the expressions-of-devotion of their aunt and uncle.

Your children weren't responsible for the unfortunate situation that arose, and if you do what you are planning to do you will be cruelly unfair to them and to their relatives who are trying to show their devotion to them. Let your children accept these gifts . . . direct them in writing (fine thank-you letters . . . and, if asked, make it possible for them to see and to be friends with their aunt and uncle. Thus will you show the good quality of your mother-heart.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

My bride-to-be is planning our wedding as what she calls a "semi-formal wedding," a church wedding to take place in the evening. My attendants (best man and ushers) and I are to wear tuxedos. At a formal daytime wedding I know that it is correct for the groom and his best man to wear Ascot ties while the ushers wear less "important" ties, usually four-in-hand. So I wonder if, at my wedding, my best man and I may wear white bow ties with our tuxedos, the ushers wearing black bow ties. Would this be correct?

PROSPECTIVE GROOM.

No, this would not be correct . . . a white tie is not correct with a tuxedo. However, to make the differentiation you have in mind, the groom and best man at this type of evening wedding sometimes wear white waistcoats (proper and very fashionable with tuxedos), and the ushers wear black waistcoats. Why not make this plan?

Let's Eat

By IDA BAILEY ALLEN

THE CHIEF CAME into the kitchen with a broad grin on his face. He deposited his package on the table with a flourish, obviously waiting for a cue. "What's in the bag?" I asked.

"A wonderful buy!" he said. "Dried peaches. The supply is plentiful and the prices are down 40 per cent below last year. Such a bargain I could not resist!"

FIVE POUNDS

That was quite evident, for he had bought five pounds! But they could be easily used. Half of them could be kept closely covered in a jar in a cool place so they would not dry out. The rest could be plain stewed or pressure cooked for use in various ways during the coming week or two. In this case, no sugar should be added; the right amount should be put in when the dish is made.

Dried peaches should be well washed in tepid water, then covered with boiling water, soaked fifty minutes and cooked in the same water to conserve not only the vitamins and minerals, but the fragrant delicate taste. The cooked peaches are put in a big glass jar and kept covered in the refrigerator. This method is time-saving—quite different from the old-fashioned overnight soaking job.

PEACH FIES

Most homemakers would plain-stew dried peaches. Some would make dried peach pies.

A few might prepare dried peaches in gelatin, as a cobler, or deep-dish pie. But rare is the woman who would transform them into a sweet-pickle peach relish. "And that," commented the chef, "is the ideal accompaniment for chicken supreme—the broiled creamed chicken, with the half pickled peach on the top."

"That will be fine for dinner," I exclaimed.

The chef's face dropped. "But we are not having chicken supreme for the dinner, we are having the farmhouse baked beans with the sausage cakes."

"But that's my favorite Saturday night meal!" I commented, "and a good relish is a must where baked beans and sausage are served. Those sweet pickled dried peaches will taste marvelous."

The Chef had already started to wash 2 pounds of the peaches, remarking as he turned on the tap:

"I shall pressure cook the remainder to use in my special compote à la Waldorf. We can have it some day soon, non?"

To which I answered, "Oui, next week."

TOMATO SOUP
SPANISH STYLE

Serve canned tomato soup with a big tablespoonful of fried onions in each plate.

FARM-HOUSE BAKED BEANS
Pick over 1 lb. pea beans. Place in a good-sized sauce pan, cover with boiling water and cook fifty min. Add 1 1/2 tsp. salt; bring to boiling point and boil 30 min. Then add 2 tsp. molasses, 1/4 tsp. dry mustard, 1/4 tsp. pepper and 1/4 c. chopped onion.

Score the rind of 2 cunes salt pork; that is, cut it in squares. Put it in the bottom of a casserole. Pour in the bean mixture. If necessary add a little hot water so the beans will be covered. Put on a lid and bake steadily 1 1/2 hrs. at 350 F. Then uncover; bring the pork to the top, and cook uncovered until the beans are tender and both pork and beans are brown.

SAUSAGE CAKES

Shape sausage meat, or cut roll-sausage meat, into flat round cakes. Cover with boiling water to remove excess fat. Then drain.

Slow-broil on top of the range, or in the oven. Turn once, allowing about 12 min.

SWEET PICKLED DRIED PEACHES

Wash thoroughly 1 lb. dried peaches in tepid water; soak fifty min. in boiling water barely to cover; drain. To 1 cup of the soaking water add 1 cup mild cider vinegar, 1 1/4 cups brown or granulated sugar, 6 whole cloves, and a 2-inch stick of cinnamon. Bring to a boil and boil 5 min. Add the peaches and simmer in the syrup until barely tender.

TRICK OF THE CHEF

For spinach Casino, drain the liquid from a can of spinach and use for soup. Fry a little minced onion in butter, add the spinach and 1/2 c. solid canned tomato and heat.

Hostess' Favorite Recipe

By MARTHA LEE

DR. ELDA ROBB, professor at Simmons College, is enthusiastic about her Chocolate Chiffon Pie. "It's one of the nicest special-occasion desserts imaginable," she said. "I don't mean occasions like Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner because it's much too rich to round out such heavy meals. I like it for party menus—winter or summer—perhaps with a salad as the main course, and good hot coffee as the beverage."

CHOCOLATE CHIFFON PIE

2 oz. chocolate
1/2 cup boiling water
1 tsp. plain gelatin
1/4 cup cold water
4 egg yolks
1/2 cup sugar

1—Melt chocolate in boiling water; add gelatin softened in cold water. Stir until gelatin dissolves.

2—Add egg yolks beaten light with the first quantity of sugar.

3—Add salt and vanilla; chill until partially set, stirring occasionally.

4—Beat the second quantity of sugar into the egg white.

5—Fold the chocolate mixture into the beaten whites. Pour into baked pie shell; chill until firm; spread with whipped cream and sprinkle with candy cane. Makes one 9-inch pie.

This Young Boy Complains Of Unique Family Problem

BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN, FRIDAY, JAN. 16, 1948

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX: I am a boy 15. When I was 14, I had to quit school and help make ends meet in the family. To get to the point, my mother hates me very much, or at least acts as though she does. Many times she has told me to leave home and live somewhere east.

It all started when I was working nights I used to sleep late in the morning, and as my mother goes to work, I cleaned house when I got up as late I could. I have three sisters, but I also did their work. My mother used to complain that I didn't clean the house well enough and that I got up too late. Now that I am working days, she still complains, and my sisters all think she is right. Please advise me what to do. Should I leave home as she tells me, or should I stay and put up with it?

"Motherless"

Dear "Motherless":

It would be pretty hard for me to form any very useful opinion of your situation without knowing more about it. Are you quite sure that your mother has no cause whatever to criticize you? It seems hard to believe that any mother would behave in such a way without any reason whatever, particularly in the case of a son who had left school at such an early age to help her with her financial problem.

AVOID IRRITATION

Even though, through having had to start work so young, you have undoubtedly become more independent and self-reliant than most boys of your age, I think it would be bad for a 15-year-old to leave home and strike out alone. Instead, I suggest that you analyze the situation a bit to see if there may not be some ways in which you are irritating your mother and sisters that you can correct, so that they can live more comfortably with them for another year or two. Just be sure that you are doing your part to make your home a nice place to be in, so that when you do leave it, you will have no cause to blame yourself in later years.

Fills Ensemble Needs

By EILEEN CALLAHAN

OUR important dates have a way of all coming at once. Weeks may go by with no more exciting social engagement than a double feature movie at the neighborhood theater. Then all at once our days are so full of dates for luncheon, meetings, cocktails, dinner and theater that we don't have time even to change our costumes in between.

At these times, we long for an ensemble beautiful enough to see us through all our engagements in style, adaptable enough to do it painlessly. The costume designed by Fira Benenson and sketched today fills both needs. It is a dress and jacket ensemble in black satin with black velvet applique.

The dress has a full skirt, slightly extended at the hips. Its bodice is cut square and low and is draped to each side. The full, easy sleeves are padded above the elbow. The matching jacket is collarless. Its peplums are solidly padded. Its sleeves correspond with those of the dress. The skirt of the dress and one side of the jacket have strewn appliques of black velvet flowers.

Marie 'The Body' McDonald, Lanny Ross Share Honors

By PEGGY DOYLE

Between Lanny Ross' topnotch way around the scales and the audience's ocular way around Marie "The Body" McDonald's enticing curves, the RKO-Boston's opening stage show yesterday got off to the slick start.

Ross has a superb voice, and his mastery of the occasionally flagrantly obstreperous bubble-gummers that take over the theater at the opening-shows was something to cheer about.

His repertoire included "Falling in Love With Love," "And Mimi," "Antoinette" (a French sailor's lament for his faraway Antoinette in pdgin Americane), "The Whiffenpoof Song" and "Serenade of the Belle."

He and the lovely Miss McDonald, back on stage in a gown that fitted her like the skin on a peach, did a duet of "Embraceable You" that stopped the show.

It also closed it. Miss McDonald, who had been advised by a friend on her arrival of the uninhibited character of these Thursday midday "gambol" audiences, had soloed halfway through the bill, wearing for this debut appearance a most debaucherish gown instead of the originally planned traffic-stopping one. It didn't get a whistle . . . just as she had planned it.

Demurely, and with a sweet but hardly a song-selling voice, she sang "Golden Earrings," "Can't Get a Man With a Gun" and "Ballerina," omitting "The Body Number" parody because not a few of its lines might have been too naughtily suggestive to the boys with the big mouths in the audience.

Wink and Mae, competent little dance team, opened the show, followed by Ladd Lyon, whose acrobatic act with audience participation is geared for laughs. For something quite different, he does a Paul Draper-Larry Adler takeoff that clicks.

Strictly for laughs are Low, Hite and Stanley, who bill themselves as "extremes in fun" on account of Mr. H. measures seven

Joan Crawford in Weeper Film at Met

Joan Crawford again is suffering like anything in "Daisy Kenyon," the Met's plushy, new 20th Century-Fox tenant in which her lot would seem to be a vale of tears wherein only real thing in life since the war. He persuades her to marry him, builds her a Cape Cod cottage (he had been a yacht designer in civilian life), cheerfully awaits the day when she comes to him, dew-eyed with the wonder of it all, to tell him "Peter, I love you."

You will not be told the trick ending here for it is the picture's saving grace, that and the exchange of dialogue between Fonda to him, dew-eyed with the won-

He has everything and all she has, she chides him, is her work which he is destroying by pursuing her to distraction when she would be quits with him.

That's what she says, but you needn't believe her. Also, you wonder how a clear-thinking, vital sort of fellow could have gotten himself involved with two such hopelessly neurotic women. His wife, apparently completely out of love with him, takes out her spleen by cuffing her sensitive, little daughter, injuring her ear in one instance.

Into this unperturbed situation slinks shy, whimsical Henry Fonda, a discharged soldier, who keeps telling Daisy she is the

More About the Hah-Vuds; Reply To Harding '39

By AUSTEN LAKE

AS I'VE OFTEN REMARKED there's no football bigot like an old football bigot. Which brings me to the screech just mailed in by Austin Harding, Hah-vud '39, who asks that I be barred from the Harvard Stadium and cast into outer darkness as a moral leper. And why? Because I recently blushed Harvard football fundamentals to the color that Harvard men prefer.

Says Austin, which is a sissy name in itself, "If I was Bill Bingham and you ever came near the stadium again I would have one of those little sissies (sic, a member of the Harvard football team) bounce you right out of Cambridge on your ear, and you would deserve less decent treatment."

Well, Austie, chum, for your edification I sat down with some fifteen or twenty of the Harvard 1947 football team on Wednesday morning, at their invitation, in the Varsity Club and we chewed the fat, punched the bag and shot the breeze for an hour and a half—very amicably, with both sides making soulful confessions. Nobody suggested that my just due was a punch on the snoot or I should be drummed out of town minus my pants, though there were some, or all, with the requisite body, boots and knuckles to do it.

The Hah-vuds Are Superior

NO, AUSTIE, I FEAR YOU have acquired delusions of violence since you carried a bag of wind for Harvard back in the days of the Big Apathy. How many grass fires from the friction of your meat and bones did you ever start in the stadium? Still that's a tradition among old varsity codgers when they begin to feel their chests slip into their laps and to remember what curly wolves they were and how with a single crook of their index finger they stripped some rival naked. It makes good telling to the children before patting their chubby rumps and sending them off to dreams.

You invite me to publish your letter, which mostly deals with Harvard's brand of idealistic sportsmanship and swings off into empty space from there. So, Austie, baby-walsy, I will discuss that brand of sportsmanship, without revealing what the Harvard varsity players said to me or I to them, which by mutual agreement was "in executive session" as the Congressmen say.

Last autumn, before a major game, less than 200 devoted alma mammy lovers turned up for a pre-game pep meeting to whoop the Harvard varsity on its way. That's a ratio of 1 to every 30 students. Because Harvard men regard it as a disgraceful conclusion by a childish device too silly for their intelligent dignity. They came to the conclusion that the night before a game is no time to indulge in revels, because obviously there is nothing to cheer about. Cheers are for victories won through meritorious effort and the time to acknowledge them is after they occur. So the Hah-vud crowd got treated up before the game, and they couldn't light any barriers under themselves, although I believe because, except to the few formal was just a lot of fuss because unsuited to persons of stature.

Harvard considers far superior to most out of things they must have, and they do not run out. Yet the pep meeting is still considered an important phase of student life in most other institutions, including such social equals as Yale and Princeton, where the old varsity positives swarm back on the eve of the big objective and all day long, in 11, will rise and tell you Hank Smucker snipped on his leg in the ankle before his memorable 80-yard touchdown run on the raw bleeding sore and other grays regressive how Old Hank never could go down up to his real game till he broke his leg.

And presently old Hank, looking away, saugy and seedy, will hobble up to take his bows and in grammar grown rusty with the years, will give full credit for his run to Old Ole Olson for cleaning out opposing tacklers, a front row of boxes, the goal posts and the main ticket entrance with one rolling block. Then he will predict that the Gold Ochre and Buff will wave triumphant over the Creamed Corn and Mock Turtle in tomorrow's climactic contest even if the colors had dipped to six other teams this season.

BUT THE HAH-VUDS ARE superior to such juvenile twaddle ever since the time that Dolph Cheek, the 1925 football captain, coined his "overemphasis" phrase and preached the gospel of Harvard boredom, and the late Maj Fred Moore (R. I. P.) made Harvard games socially sanitary by creating a "black list" for Harvard men who transferred their stadium ticket courtesies without H. A. A. permission, and sport writers were regarded as professional pests, like blue bottle flies, sent to pester proud people.

Much of that has been corrected since Harvard box-office statistics began to give clear indication that the stadium facilities were more than ample for student and graduate capacity. The black list was dropped and uneducated people are now welcome to pay $2.20 and $3.30. Also the waxes of the press are encouraged to spin columns of free publicity. So I don't think it would be good policy to bounce the sport writers out on their ears, as Austie Harding suggests, when they don't write glory stories and sometimes get a little petulant with Harvard's repetitious flows, of which Harding's trainee can rub some. Because Harvard men's passion for their team don't seem to whip into full frenzy until they are away from the ivy-crowned halls a couple of college generations, by which time they become more sophisticated than the sophomores, who are more supercilious than the grads.

In closing it has always been my contention that the football players and not the coach should receive all credit for games won and in the case of the late Harvard teams, I would blame them largely for their own failures. Nor should old Harvard worshippers like Austie Harding resent his Alma Mammy being called floppers and fumblefeet unless they are also willing to resent being described as various kinds of flashes, meteors, ghosts and hurricanes when they win. There is such a thing as having too sweet a tooth for praise and no stomach for censure. And, as far as the Harvard football kids of '47 go, I will take them and give the Hah-vud student-body to Austie and posterity, which are the same thing.

Leahy Looms as Lions Coach

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (INS)—It can be definitely stated today that Frank Leahy, always the handy, all-purpose nominee among humorists and guess-againers, will be asked by the incoming ownership to coach the Detroit (National League) Lions in 1948. At

"See you tomorrow in Worcester"

Osmanski Returns Here Saturday

Dr. Bill Osmanski, new Holy Cross football coach, sent the following wire to Mike Gilooly today:

"Am training to Worcester on the New England States arriving Saturday in Worcester at 9 a. m." Gilooly was hoping to have Osmanski speak at the Record-American all-scholastic dinner at the Lenox Monday evening, but Osmanski replied:

"My visit will be too brief. Have business appointments in Chicago Monday."

HC's Byers Discharged; Will Play for Osmanski

WORCESTER, Jan. 16 (INS)—Joe Byers, speedy chinay runner for the Holy Cross football team in 1945, has been released from the Army and will return to school next month.

Byers weighs only 165 pounds, but his speed is expected to find a good outlet in Coach Bill Osmanski's T formation.

Brooklyn Club to Beat, Says Phillies Chapman

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Jan. 16 (INS). — Philadelphia Phillies' manager Ben Chapman today picked Brooklyn as the "club to beat" in the National loop this year.

Chapman, in Montgomery briefly with scout Johnnie Nee, added that he didn't think his Philadelphia club "has much of a chance" for the national pennant in 1948.

the same time, it was almost equally definite that Wally Butts of Georgia had been sounded out, indirectly and provisionally, in the same connection and had indicated he wouldn't be interested in leaving the Athens campus at this or any intermediate date.

Also due for a discreet inquiry—provided it hasn't already happened—is Dr. Eddie Anderson head coach at Iowa.

But clearly high man on the preferential list was Leahy, as the weary, bleary magnates of the National Football League assembled for another day of their annual meeting.

And Leahy, it evidently will be—until such time as the messian of South Bend either gives them the nod or the shake-off.

The latter might be reasonably looked for, in view of Leahy's reputed $40,000 income from all sources while holding the Notre Dame job which, by the way, he has contracted to continue holding until deep in the 1950's. But the situation is not completely without conflict and an element of personal values.

Some of Leahy's revenue, in fact, has been coming from the beer-baseball and radio group, which acquired franchise control from Fred Mandel for a reputed $200,000.

Moreover, broadcaster Harry Wismer mightn't have been in the investment as heavily as "Spike" Briggs, who supplies Briggs Stadium and those motorcar millions. Likewise Edwin J. Anderson, the brewer; Charles F. Fisher, Jr., of the auto-body fortune, or perhaps D. Lyle Fife, the new club president.

But it was Wismer who originated the dicker and organized the buying group. And he is definitely Leahy's "man" and/or vice versa.

Snow's Anderson, who tried unsuccessfully to resign last season, denied at Iowa City that he had been approached by the Detroit syndicate or knew anything of its plans.

This incident has served to rate the doctor a strong secondary choice potential for the Detroit spot, where the payoff would be a minimum $40,000 to Leahy. But not quite so gaudy in other cases.

Swanky Hialeah Is Garden Spot Of Turf Racing

By JACK CONWAY

THE FLORIDA RACING SCENE switched today to swanky Hialeah Park where a 40-day meeting opened which will continue through March 2. While Gulfstream Park offered some excellent racing and Tropical Park will later stage an attractive meeting, it is Hialeah Park with its pink flamingoes and $250,000 worth of tropical shrubbery that draws the class horses, the millionaire owners, and those carefree souls who like to parade in the most fashionable sports clothes as they push $100 bills through the mutual windows.

There is no track that surpasses Hialeah Park in tradition or in the caliber of racing offered. There are many wealthy owners who will race their fine thoroughbreds at Hialeah for much less money than they would at any other track.

These people have Winter homes in Florida. Hialeah is as much a part of their social life as it is the place where their racing colors are carried to the post by perfectly trained thoroughbreds. Before the present meeting ends, Armed, Assault and many other horses with national standing will have walked into the stalls of the starting gate at Hialeah Park, fidgeted around nervously as the starter waited for the field to get into line, and then gone bounding on to victory after the starting gate was opened.

There will be million-dollar betting days at Hialeah Park. There have been in recent years, and there is no reason to believe the 1948 meeting will be an exception.

At Hialeah Park last Winter, Mort Mahony told me there had been some falling off in the play at the $100 window. The abundance of fresh money that was around in war days had dried up to some extent. Black market profits were also gone. Racegoers, however, were still at the track, but they were more conservative in their wagering.

People who have been around racing all their lives say it is better to have less betting. This condition places greater emphasis on racing, and less on the flashes of the mutual board.

There will be plenty of attractive stake races at Hialeah Park. They will draw the better horses, and one will then know what to expect from the stars of the turf this year.

Kennedy Big Stockholder in Hialeah

FORMER AMBASSADOR Joseph P. Kennedy is one of the largest stockholders in Hialeah Park. He took over the stock holdings of the late Col. Edward R. Bradley a few years before that famous horse owner died. Kennedy lives at Palm Beach, and he will attend the races at Hialeah with members of his family and parties of friends.

There are thousands of New Englanders in Florida, and many of them will be on the lawn or in the stands at Hialeah Park trying to root home horses on which they hold mutual tickets.

Dan Carroll, Mrs. Carroll and their daughter, Mary, are expected to attend the races with Phil Buccola and Mrs. Buccola. Buccola is planning to fly to Boston following the Hialeah Park opening to handle Joey Angelo of Providence in his ten-round bout with Willie Pep at a Goodwin A. C. show at the Garden next Monday night.

Santa Anita and the Fair Grounds will operate at the same time as Hialeah. The Fair Grounds and Santa Anita have been offering top racing, and they will try to surpass the cards at the Florida track.

DR. EUGENE BRADLEY, veterinarian for the Massachusetts Racing Commission since 1935 who is dead at his home in Marlboro, did much for racing. It was due to his efforts that there were few cases of stimulation of horses in this State. Dr. Bradley, who had owned and driven trotting horses, warned an improper practice from the time of his appointment by Charley Connors who was then chairman of the Massachusetts Commission.

I was State racing steward in the early days of the sport here, and I had a closeup of Dr. Bradley's excellent work. Later, as presiding steward at the State Fairs, Dr. Bradley was one of my associates.

During a meeting at Great Barrington, I had dinner one evening at Jack's restaurant with Bayard Tuckerman, Jr., Harry Allen, members of the Racing Commission at the time, George Donahoe, and Dr. Bradley. Tuckerman had entertained the Duke and Duchess of Windsor the previous day at a luncheon at the Hotel Statler in Boston. I accompanied the luncheon with nobility to the dinner in the little cafe in the Ducheries.

"The Duke would love to be here with us," said Bayard. "This is the kind of a party he likes."

As the evening wore on, Tuckerman, Dr. Bradley and the other members of the party told various stories on sports. Tuckerman traced his family back 300 years on the North Shore. As Bayard moved back in his story a generalization at a time, Dr. Bradley's eye lit up, while a smile played around his lips. Finally Tuckerman completed his story.

"When your ancestors first came to America, mine were already here," said Dr. Bradley.

Tuckerman, who like myself had known Dr. Bradley for many years, for the first time recognized the significance of the high cheek bones and flashing eyes.

"You're an Indian, Doc," exclaimed Bayard.

"Half Indian, half Irish," was the reply of the famous veterinarian.

Those persons who like honesty in racing as well as a touch of human kindness will miss Dr. Bradley.

Celtics Seek First Win Over Stags

By FRED HOEY

CHUCK HIGLEY, Boston's new head coach for the Celtics when they meet the Chicago Stags at Boston Garden tonight, Stan Noska, veteran guard who finished last season's 501 points in 38 games for the Boston Celtics and 100 total points in taking the place of the injured Dutch Garlin, who is nursing a twisted knee injury. They will not be playing for five games, according to the Celtics' plan.

Noska, who played in college basketball at Duquesne, is 27 years old, stands 6-1 and weighs 185 pounds.

The Stags, current leaders of the western section of the Basketball Ass'n with a 14-7 slate, are the hottest team in both divisions.

They bring to the Hub Max Zaslofsky and Stan Muskat. Max is decked out with Ed Sadovskiy, of the Celtics for second place in scoring with 411 points each, as even-handed headliners Joe Fuks, the pacesetter.

The locals will be seeking their initial win over the Windy City, five since the league has been organized. In seven games, the Celtics have been on the receiving end each time.

Tonight's game will be the second in this campaign. In an earlier visit here, the Stags dumped the Russellmen easily, 83-75.

The preliminary brings together two good high school teams in Medford and Quincy.

'New Tunney' Fights Janiro in N. Y.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (INS)—Lavern Roach, the young Texan who is being hailed as another Gene Tunney, gets his big chance at Madison Square Garden tonight.

Roach, like Tunney, came out of the Marines to build an impressive record as a professional. Since his discharge he has won 22 of 23 starts, the last 17 in a row.

Tonight, however, he will be 13 to 10 underdog in his first bout with classy Tony Janiro, a Youngstown, O. native.

This is the toughest fight as yet.

48 Dodds Skips 'Y' Race Pointing to KC Mile

By MIKE GILLOOLY

Looking ahead to the Knights of Columbus meet at the Garden a week from tomorrow, Parson Gil Dodds has passed up 32d annual track and field games at the Huntington YMCA tomorrow afternoon (1:30 p. m.) but he will be on hand to act as starter for the two-mile handicap.

Talented Field Will Compete In K. C. Vault

Most talented pole vault field since Cornelius Warmerdam was in his prime. That's what Bill Kenney announced today for his Knights of Columbus games, which will be staged one week from tomorrow at Boston Garden.

Foremost on the list is Richmond "Boo" Morcom, 1947 BAA games winner and a leading candidate for the Olympic team. Next on the list is George Appel, husky Yale freshman who was runner-up to Morcom last year while a student at Andover. Appel gives promise of developing into another Sabin Carr or Keith Brown, Yale immortals.

Newcomers to Boston will be Bob Richards of Illinois A. C. and George Thompson of Villanova. Richards won the 1947 vault at the Millrose games and Thompson won his specialty in the 1947 New York AC games.

"Richards is vaulting higher than 14 feet in the Illinois pit," wrote ex-Columbian Dick Gansler to Kenney. "He's good enough to win your event."

Gansler himself is good enough to win but he has withdrawn his entry because he aggravated a shoulder nerve while vaulting with Richards in Illinois.

Rounding out the exceptional early season vaulting field are Bill Lawrence and Andy Lockett of Harvard, Pete Harwood, Harvard alumnus, Bob Schleicher of Brown and Frank Calabrese of Holy Cross.

Pep-Angelo Bout Clicking With Fans

The Willie Pep-Joe Angelo non-title featherweight boxing bout which will be held at the Garden Monday night is gaining momentum.

Pep has just turned in impressive wins over Biesca and McAllister while Angelo's last two Boston bouts, with Pat Brady and Bob Montgomery, have placed him in a significant spot.

The tickets sales for the bout have been good. The fans seem to realize that this will be an important fight for Angelo.

Streamlined Track Aids Skaters in Derby

By JACK CONWAY, JR.

The Silver Skates Derby speed racing track has gone streamlined for the 1948 Record-American-Advertiser classic and records are expected to be endangered in each of the ten racing classes. The new track is designed to give the speedsters more of a curved, gliding run on the second and fourth corners. The new Derby track has met with the unanimous approval of the North Eastern Speed Skating Ass'n.

The old Derby track, used for 12 straight seasons, was rectangular in shape. The skaters then had to round four 90 degree turns. The new track is a parallelogram in shape. The first turn, after the start, is cut at a sharp angle. The second, running into the back stretch, has been opened so there will be less bunching. The third turn is sharp, like the first.

The most important turn, at the fourth corner heading into the home stretch, is open and will enable skaters to race at almost full speed to the finish line. "Too many skaters have been eliminated in past Derbies while trying to round that last corner at top speed," said Paul Whelpley, president of the North Eastern S. A. "The skaters like the new idea very much."

We accompanied Ben Levas, Derby Director to New York earlier this week to see the new style track in use at the New York Silver Skates at Madison Square Garden. Officials of the Middle Atlantic Speed Skating Ass'n in New York declare that there are about 50 per cent less falls on the turns with the new track.

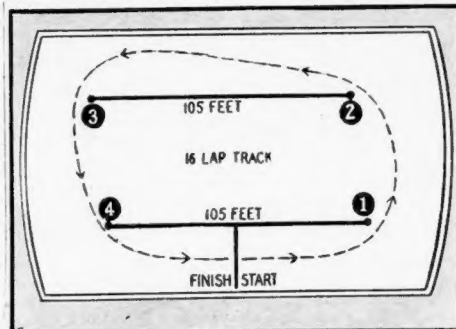

Paul Brown, manager of the Boston Arena expects a great turnout for the FREE Silver Skates speed skating session to be held at the Arena between 3 and 5 on Sunday afternoon. The session will be open only to skaters who will race in the Silver Skates Derby.

The Hingham Ice Carnival, also on Sunday, will offer an opportunity to other speedsters to get in top racing shape for the Derby which will be held this year at the Boston Garden on Sunday afternoon, Feb. 1.

Foster Weiss, leading N. E. figure skating official, states that plans are under way to stage an Ice Carnival at Walpole Saturday, Jan. 31. The Carnival will feature figure skating as well as speed skating, another tuneup for the Derby, the day after.

GET YOUR TICKET

There are still thousands of good seats left for the 13th annual Record-American-Advertiser Silver Skates Derby which will be held at Boston Garden, Feb. 1. The tickets sell for $1, 50 cents and 35 cents and may be purchased at Garden, Arena and James W. Brine's Sporting Goods Store on Summer st.

BARBARA ANN AGAIN Amateur Bouts Carded For Lynn Arena Jan. 23

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, Jan. 16 (AP)—It looks like pretty, 18-year-old Barbara Ann Scott is going to bring Canada its first Olympic women's figure skating title when she returns to her Ottawa home from St. Moritz, Switzerland.

Miss Scott successfully defended her European figure skating title here last night. In demonstrating that she probably is the world's top-ranking woman amateur skater, Miss Scott was the unanimous choice of all seven judges.

The Trojan A. C. will stage their fourth amateur boxing show next Friday evening, Jan. 23, at the Lynn Arena. There will be two classes, 135 and 147, for novices, with five open divisions.

NHL Prexy's Remarks Irk Local Scribes

By BILL GRIMES

"No sport in the U. S. has played to sellout crowds for two years," declared Col. Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, during the press conference before the Bruins-Detroit game Wednesday.

"Natch," Colonel! "Natch!" Now, has the National Hockey League?

It was very apparent that Col. Campbell's remark didn't set well with the writers. It was anything but diplomatic and smacked too much of the Union Jack.

Any and all attempts by hockey magnates to place their sport on the same pedestal with baseball are funnier than Arthur Godfrey.

The NHL has NOT played to sellout crowds for two years. The Colonel stressed that the fifth place Rangers and the sixth place Blackhawks drew a record-breaking crowd to Madison Sq. Garden for their final game of the 1946-47 campaign. So what?

The Rangers and Blackhawks cash in on the floating population that drifts in and out of New York and Chicago. If Rangers and the Hawks were representing any other city on the NHL loop for the past four or five years, the owners would have been taken to the cleaners.

Campbell failed to inform the group that Rangers and the Blackhawks haven't been good attractions on the road for years. It was the exception, not the rule, when either New York or Chicago taxed the capacity of Boston Garden. The same holds true for Detroit. With pro hockey restricted to one night (Saturdays), the Toronto and Montreal fans naturally would fill the Maple Leaf Gardens and the Forum.

Instead of making even veiled references to the empty seats in major league baseball parks, Campbell should concentrate on expanding the NHL. If such a step hasn't met with the approval of the two Canadian members, Toronto and Montreal, who hog the Saturday home games, then he should at least hold his future remarks about "no sport in the U. S. has played to sellout crowds for two years," for Canadian consumption.

Women in 2-Day Ski Meet On Twisting Tecumseh Trail

By "TAP" GOODENOUGH

It's the Fair Sex on skis tomorrow and Sunday, at Waterville Valley, N. H., where the Eastern Women's downhill, slalom, and combined championships will be contested on the twisting Tecumseh Trail, which plunges down Mt. Tecumseh for one mile, with a vertical descent of 1265 feet, and a maximum grade of 30 degrees.

Sponsored by the Black and Blue Trail Smashers, of Lowell, the downhill event will start at noon, tomorrow, while the slalom will begin at 11:00 a. m., on the Sabbath. The races are open to all A, B, or C, and unclassified skiers, although the latter must present written evidence of their ability.

A field of close to 40 gals is expected to compete for the Sandier Cup. Heading the list is Sue Neidinger, of Hanover, N. H., a very consistent racer, who just missed a berth on the U. S. Olympic ski team.

She will receive competition aplenty from such feminine flyers as Ann Dodge, Gail Macomber, Pauline Hannah, Lucy Hawkes Lamson, Betty Horton, and a quartette of girls from Middlebury University.

"Darkhorse" of the races will be blonde Peggy Taylor Kenney, from Franconia, N. H., who has an excellent chance—if her legs can stand the strain. Peggy, by the way, won the initial running of the Walter Foley Memorial Slalom, in 1946, and she has gone a long way since then. Woman's record for the Tecumseh Trail is held by Olympic skier Rebecca Fraser Cremer, of Woodstock, Vt., with the terrific time of one minute, 38.4 seconds! This little lass averaged 45 miles per hour over the course.

QUICK CHRISTIES: Speaking of Waterville Valley, we wonder why more skiers don't visit this superb schuss center. The Inn is open, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Bean, both experts, while a large open slope is nearby, serviced with a 1500-foot rope tow and floodlights. A natural snow bowl, the Valley is a veritable Shangri-La for skiing, offering sport into May.

Due to complaints of high tow prices at other areas, Dick Stimpson, operator of the Intervale, N. H., ski area, has slashed his rates to a new low. His hoists run continuously daily, from 8:00 a. m. until 4:00 p. m., and an all-day ticket costs only $2.50.

HC, RI State Tune Up For Tuesday's Meeting

One of the few sell-out crowds to witness college basketball at the Boston Garden will scramble to the North Station depot Tuesday night for the Holy Cross-Rhode Island State game. The tussle promises to be one of the best attractions of the C. A. and St. Alphonsus of Roxbury teams in action.

The program, which has the freshmen tabbed for action also, has been sold out for better than a month. From the ticket requests, there is no telling just how many fans would witness the game if the seating capacity was unlimited.

Both clubs will be in competition tonight as a last tune-up before they encounter one another. The Crusaders are in Providence to face Brown, and the Rhode Islanders are in Philadelphia to test the St. Joseph's five.

Although both teams have been running hot and cold during the current campaign, both figure to be tops for this important clash. Doggie Julian thinks his charges have finally found themselves with the Harvard game, and the 104 to 80 triumph of the Staters over Brooklyn College indicates they have reached their peak.

Pics, Valleyfield Meet on Garden Ice To Break Deadlock

The Valleyfield, Que., Braves are the one bunch of Canadian players in the Quebec Senior League against whom the local Olympics have pretty good luck. Mentioning the Montreal Royals, Ottawa Senators, Shawinigan Falls, and Quebec Beavers in the same breath with the Pics is something else again. These last four teams invariably are too fast and powerful for the locals.

So tomorrow night the Pics will be trying to break the deadlock which exists with Valleyfield when they tackle these Frenchmen in the feature at the Garden. These teams have divided four games.
